To hike safely, you should have good hiking shoes or boots, a waterproof jacket or windbreaker, and a sweater. Warmer gear is needed during fall, winter, and spring. Be sure to carry drinking water, a first aid kit, and a flashlight in your pack, as well as an emergency supply of food. Use common sense and good judgment when hiking in inclement weather, especially during late fall, winter, and early spring. When planning your return trip, remember that all trails do not return to the same place. When preparing for a hike, check the approximate time that darkness falls and take a flashlight just in case. The average hiker should allow approximately one hour for each trail mile.

If You Become Lost, S.T.O.P.

Stop, Think, Observe and Plan. Decide on a plan and stick to it. If the last known location of the trail is within a reasonable distance, try and backtrack to it. If you can’t find the trail, do not panic, stay put and seek cover from adverse weather. If notified, rescuers will begin a search of the areas near your original planned route. Listen for whistles and respond to them or other signals. It is important to leave your plans with a responsible person. Adults hiking with children should not let them stray ahead or lag behind.
